

World Happenings In Pictures

THE ADMIRAL COULDN'T DO BETTER.

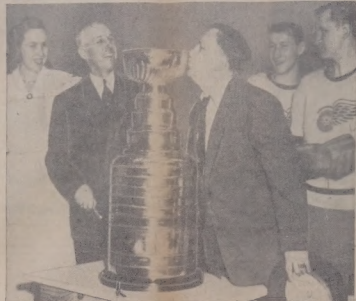

WHAT'S HER DISPLACEMENT?—

CHOW WITH THE SKIPPER—

FASHION: An unusual side draping gives a train effect to this dress in vivid green and white striped Sudan cotton. It's an original model created by Irish Designer Irene Gilbert.

STANLEY CUP—Jim Skinner who piloted Red Wings to their Stanley Cup triumph, kisses the big cup, after Detroit beat Canadiens in a deciding game. Owner Marguerite Norris of the Wings and NHL president Clarence Campbell, look on.

SOMETHING NEW—Sailor John Peck has something to amuse his children on his arrival in Boston on the navy icebreaker Atika, after a 4½ months expedition to the Antarctic.

ATOMIC SUN RISES ON ITS OWN DESTRUCTION: Unmanned dawn of an atomic "sunrise" is captured in the view, above, photographed from Angelo's Peak, some 50 miles from the Atomic Energy Commission's test site at Yucca Flat, Nevada. This blast, typical of many of the tests, was set off atop a 300-foot tower to simulate conditions which would prevail if an atomic device was dropped from a plane. Here close-up view, below, shows all that is left of one of the 300 to 500-foot spidewhebs of steel following a test blast. Technician is checking radiation level of wreckage. Debris is from lower part of tower; upper works are vaporized by heat of the atomic reaction.

FOLIO VACCINE: With cold storage space at a premium, this vaccine is placed in a meat locker in Tucson, Arizona.

THE MAN—Dr. Jonas Salk, back in his Pittsburgh hospital laboratory after announcement of the success of his anti-polio vaccine, examines a live virus fluid.

"HE HAD THE REACH ON ME!"—Bill Foster puts up an elegant beef during the 37th annual Navy Junior Boxing Finals at the Naval Academy, Annapolis, Md. Timmy Villarreal, no believer in the nautical or otherwise, keeps poking the lung ones although the tie is over with.

HE "NOSE" HOCKEY—Detroit Red Wings' high-scoring Ted Lindsay fails to score on this play with anything but his nose, as he is dumped by Montreal Canadiens' Butch Bouchard during second game of Stanley Cup playoffs at Detroit, Mich. Detroit put the game away, 7-1.

SIBERIAN ESCAPEE—Morris Pollin, left, studies a passport similar to one prepared by Jacob Waks of Australia more than 40 years ago, which helped him escape from Siberia.

